STATEMENT TO THE PRESS
FEBRUARY 15, 1993

Digital Equipment Corporation remains opposed to Colorado Amendment Number Two, and it supports the efforts many organizations and individuals (including this coalition) are taking to ensure equal rights (including protection against discrimination) for every member of the community.

At Digital, valuing and affirming the diversity of our employees and customers is central to the way we do business. Our key contributors come in every race, gender, nationality and sexual orientatation (among other differences); we seek to provide the kind of environment where all of our employees can flourish in their efforts to contribute to our ultimate goal of customer satisfaction.

For us, valuing diversity is not only the right thing to do but is simply good business. We want those involved and those who will become involved to know that we stand beside you, working to ensure that gay and lesbian people in the state of Colorado are afforded the same dignity, same respect and same fair treatment as those who are heterosexual.

Digital stands firm in its commitment to valuing diversity, both within the corporation and in the communities where we do business.
